BRISTOL ELEVEN HOLDS CO. SEAT MEN TO A TIE

Game Played at Doylestown, Yesterday, Ends in Tie
Score of 13-13

A WELL-PLAYED GAME

Capt. Baur's and His Line-Up Fought in Determined Manner

By a Spectator

Fate, with the aid of two partial officials, deprived Bristol out of a victory yesterday afternoon at Doylestown, when a bitterly contested football game ended in a tie, 13-13.

The local lads went to the county seat determined to bring home their first victory in the Bucks-Montgomery football league and were cheated out of that victory by poor officiating.

The particular play that caused the trouble was a long forward pass, Sackville to Cook, the ball being caught on Doylestown's 45 yard line. Cook took a couple of steps forward toward Doylestown's goal when a Doylestown back knocked the ball out of his hands. Cook grabbed the pigskin again and raced for a touchdown but it was not allowed, the referee saying it was a completed pass on the 45 yard line, and the umpire claiming it was an uncompleted forward, the umpire getting his way.

Captain "Al" Baur's and his players played along determinedly, completely outplaying Doylestown, making first downs at will. Fine crashing through for a touchdown in the closing minutes of the game, tying the score.

Sackville going through center in the opening minutes of play for Bristol's first touchdown and Frankie Cook kicking the point after touchdown marked these two Rambo's and Walick as the out-standing players for the county seaters.

First Period

Doylestown kicked off before a fair crowd, Baur's catching the ball on Bristol's 45 yard line. A try through the line proved fruitful, Sackville gaining about 5 yards. Another thrust through center by Fine netted eight more yards and a first down. Quarterback Sackville called Eddie McIlvaine's number the next time, "Fleet Foot Eddie" gaining four yards around end. Rodgers then charged through tackle for another first down. Sackville next carried the ball over the line for the first touchdown, Frank Cook kicking the added point.

The teams saw-sawed back and forth for the rest of the period with Doylestown fighting hard to keep their goal line safe from further danger, the quarter ending with Bristol leading, 7-0.

Second Period

In this quarter it was a different tale. Bristol seemed to ease up and Doylestown quick to take advantage started an aerial attack. Blank to Rambo, that netted them considerable yardage. Rambo charged through the right side of Bristol's line for six yards. Miller then carried the ball around end for a nice gain. Right down the field marched the Doylestown players within scoring distance, when the Bristol line stiffened and Doylestown lost the ball on downs on the Blue and Gold seven yard line. Sackville kicked out of danger to Doylestown's 40 yard line where Rambo scooped the pigskin up and carried it back to the 50 yard mark. An aerial attack was then started, Rambo shooting a long forward to Gordon, who was dropped on Bristol's 35 yard line. A series of line plays of tackle and around end gained good yardage. Doylestown again lost the ball on downs on Bristol's 10 yard line. In kicking out of danger, a Doylestown forward blocked the ball, Rambo scooping it up and scoring a touchdown—Walick kicking the extra point. Score at half-time, 7-7.

Third Period

The third quarter was hardly under way when Walick intercepted a long pass and raced 30 yards for the second Doylestown touchdown. Walick failed to kick the additional point.

Bristol started a line crashing offense led by Sackville that carried them right through Doylestown's defense—first Fine, then Sackville, and later Rodgers made many yards through the line. Four first downs in succession were made by Bristol's speedy backs. Right up to their opponents' goal line they went, when they lost the ball on a fumble. Doylestown kicked out of danger and the ball was held in mid-field until the end of the quarter. Score: Doylestown, 13; Bristol, 7.

Fourth Period

Captain Baur's men were behind, and were fighting mad. So eager were they that they were penalized five yards for being off side. Coyle, who played a whale of a game was injured and had to be assisted off the field, Flynn substituting.

Line backs by Fine and Flynn alternated by end runs by McIlvaine, were responsible for another touchdown, Fine carrying the ball over for Bristol. Cook just missed the deciding point, the game ending in a tie, 13-13.

Annual Harvest Party To Be Given This Week

The annual harvest party given by the Sisters and pupils of St. Mark's School in aid of the Book Fund, will take place Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons and evenings in the school hall.

In connection with this affair a card party will be held on Friday evening at 8.30 o'clock in the school hall. This will be under the auspices of the Daughters of Columbus. Many beautiful prizes have been secured for this event.

BUILDING WORK IN PA. HAS INCREASED GREATLY

Construction Work Shows Gain of 14.5 in Same Month Of 1926 and 1927

ADDED STATE BRIEFS

HARRISBURG, Oct. 24 (I.N.S.)—Building and construction work in Pennsylvania increased 14.5 per cent. over the same month last year during September, according to figures compiled here by the bureau of statistics of the department of labor and industry. The report is based on building permits in 37 of the principal communities of the State.

During the month permits were issued for the construction, alteration or repair of 445 buildings at an estimated cost of $19,440,218, of which $2 per cent. was new building.

Philadelphia, with an increase of $2,693,980, or 28 per cent., over September last year, accounted for a large part of the state-wide gain. Fifteen other cities reported gains, but in only four of them was the total increase more than $100,000. These cities and their gains were: Lancaster, $352,775; Pittsburgh, $108,476; Reading, $202,390, and Wilkesburg, $231,255.

Cities reporting gains of less than $100,000 over September last year included Duquesne, McKees Rocks, Monacahele, Oil City, Scranton, Uniontown and Warren.

Among the twenty-one cities and boroughs which showed reduced building volume for the month were five with losses in excess of $100,000. They were Erie, Wilkes-Barre, Bethlehem, Allentown and Easton.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24 (I.N.S.)—In an effort to secure for Pennsylvania the adoption of voting machines, a state wide campaign including widespread demonstrations of the machines is to be launched by the Philadelphia Committee of Seventy, the Allegheny County Elections Association and the Pennsylvania Elections Associations.

The so-called voting machine amendment to the State constitution comes before the people next year, and the allied associations are determined to begin their campaign for the machines as soon as possible.

Representatives of the three organizations, meeting here, outlined their campaign for the machines.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 24 (I.N.S.)—"Let it rain, let it pour—" That's what thousands of wild ducks are singing as they wing their way southward from Canada, for the fowl passed over a wide-spread barrage of hunters' gunfire in this region unharmed, thanks to a steady downpour of rain.

A small army of hunters, taking advantage of the open season on ducks, armed themselves to bring in duck for their tables, only to be driven from their hiding places by torrential rains.

The ducks, which had been spending the summer in Canada and northern New York State, are now headed for the Southern States.

While hunters cursed the weather, a flock of ducks demonstrated their confidence that their enemies would not brave the rain to hunt them by resting near the river here several days while a steady downpour of rain kept hunters away.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 24 (I.N.S.)—Pennsylvania's seventy-three licensed cold storage warehouses entered the present quarter year well prepared to face temporary shortage of perishable foodstuffs.

Figures made public here by the State Department of Agriculture show that the warehouses on September 30 had more eggs, butter, pork and fish than on the same date a year ago. The supply of beef and poultry, however, was slightly less.

ALL FACTIONS READY TO AID OPERATORS

Decided Change Has Taken Place in Last Few Years

TO BOOST INDUSTRY

(Editor's Note: This is the sixth and concluding article in the series prepared for The Courier by International News Service, presenting an unbiased survey of conditions in the anthracite industry.)

By James L. Kilgallen

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A right-about face has occurred in the hard coal regions of Pennsylvania, according to Daniel T. Pierce, vice-chairman of the anthracite operators' conference. Ten years ago the operators got no co-operation; today all factions are working with them, he said.

He pointed to the anthracite booster meetings in Pottsville, Scranton, Ashland, Mahanoy City, Mount Carmel, Shenandoah, Wilkes-Barre and other Pennsylvania cities.

"It used to be that they thought the operators were rolling in money, that they had created a monopoly—that the thing for the anthracite region to do was to get as much out of the industry as it could," said Pierce. "Out of this idea grew many abuses. It was thought that we could pay any kind of taxes, any kind of wages."

"But conditions now are changed. The public, labor and capital are working together. There is no danger of any labor trouble this winter. In fact, the outlook is splendid and I look forward to renewed prosperity in the anthracite business in the near future."

With winter approaching, the anthracite industry is engaged in a vigorous campaign to recover the market it almost lost during the five months' strike of 1925-1926. It is a fight against coal substitutes such as oil, coke, gas and electricity, which the public has become accustomed to use.

According to officials of the Bureau of Mines, in Washington, soft coal in use for domestic purposes accounts for much of the decrease in the use of anthracite but they cite additional reasons. A chief one, they say, is the increased efficiency in the utilization of coal, both soft and hard, as a domestic fuel. Whereas before the war coal was about five percent efficient as fuel—that is for generating steam and heat—it is now between eight and fifteen percent efficient. Hydroelectric power is 99 percent efficient and the automobile engine is five percent efficient. This has resulted in decreased buying of coal, particularly household coal.

Anthracite operators in an attempt to bolster up their market, have launched an extensive campaign to educate the consumers in the use of hard coal. The anthracite bureau of information has fuel engineers in eighteen large Eastern cities. These men offer their services free to consumers. They are recommending the use of cheaper grades of anthracite with the better grades. This reduces the cost to the consumer and increases the use of hard coal.

For a while the operators were alarmed over the oil burners, but they are now trying to sell the idea to the people that it is cheaper to burn anthracite.

If the coming winter proves to be severe, the chances are that the anthracite industry will re-establish itself on its old basis and that next summer the mines will be operated on full time, and not on a four-day week basis, as has been necessary. The operators say that their payroll for one day is $1,000,000 and that every day this cuts vitally into the money placed in circulation in the region.

A man doesn't need a dog when he starts out to hunt trouble.

Lindbergh Flew Over Bristol Yesterday Afternoon

Colonel Lindbergh flew over Bristol yesterday afternoon at about 12.33 en route to Trenton.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 24.—Lindbergh flew over Trenton and after twice circling the center of the city, swooped down to drop a greeting. The scroll fell to the direct intersection of State and Broad streets, as "We" glided down and then arose gracefully into the sky.

Hundreds of persons, eagerly awaiting the sight of the Spirit of St. Louis en route to New York upon completion of its 22,000-mile journey of the principal cities of the country, were attracted skyward by the hum of the plane's motor as it entered Trenton at exactly 12.41 o'clock.

Following the course of the Delaware River on his way here from Philadelphia, where he was acclaimed by the people of that city on Saturday, the Lone Eagle shot inward toward the monument, flying above Broad street. The plane was clearly visible as it soared over the buildings of the city, remaining for a while several hundred feet in the air. Arriving at the monument Colonel Lindbergh made a complete circle of the landmark, as he rode his plane sideways.

As he next circled the center of the city, Lindbergh gave an exhibition of aerial stunts, nose-diving his plane to within a few feet of the spiral atop the First Presbyterian Church on East State street and then soaring around it.

Crowds assembled at State and Broad streets, unmindful of a rain that arrived simultaneously with the appearance of the world-famous ace. They were astonished when, after completing his second circle of Trenton's central area, Lindbergh brought the Spirit of St. Louis down to within 15 feet above the nearby buildings and affording a final thrill by making himself visible to the crowd as he leaned over to drop the parchment.

Max Lisook, a youth, of 333 Pennington avenue, who was standing in the middle of State and Broad streets, picked up the scroll after it had struck him in the back.

JOHNNY "KID" STRAFFE TO BOX

Johnny "Kid" Straffe, the local fighting midget, and another product from St. Ann's Club, will meet a very tough opponent when he faces a well-known and hard-hitting bantam-weight in the person of "Izzy" Cohen of Trenton, tonight in the Trenton Arena.

Cohen has been training very hard for this bout and says he will stop the local boy's winning streak of twelve straight. Eight of the victories were by the knock-out route, while the other four were decisions.

Although he is only on the main preliminary card, there is much in store for this local lad who, like "Sammy" Moffo, has been training very hard in order to bring Bristol a championship.

POLITICAL HOKUM (EDITORIAL)

It comes with mighty poor grace for John F. Smoyer, at this late date, to try and justify his Democratic candidacy for Borough Council with allegations which, if they had any truth or substance, would have been made a month ago.

It is quite characteristic of him, of course, to try to play the martyr, in his bid for public sympathy, but it is very evident, nevertheless, that his recent statement about irregularities in the First Ward during the September Primary is just political hokum, and a rather cheap brand, at that.

Apparently Smoyer himself regards his Democratic nomination, resting upon just two votes, as a political fluke to which he feels it necessary to bring additional justification, and that about measures the sincerity and truth of his statements about improper voting, and other practices in the Primary.

As a matter of fact, it can be said in behalf of Mr. Winter's Republican nomination that those charged with the responsibility of management of his campaign made absolutely certain that every vote that was cast for him was the vote of a citizen possessing every legal right to participate in the Primary in the First Ward.

The challenges that were made were rejected by the entire election board unanimously, which certainly sustains the statement that the voters thus challenged were qualified electors, with every lawful right to vote in the First Ward.

Had the situation been otherwise, Smoyer and his colleagues certainly would have made their claims of wholesale irregularity at the time that one of the ballot boxes was opened and an official count made by the court. The allegations of such irregularities at this late date simply indicate that Smoyer himself does not think much of his Democratic nomination, and hence is endeavoring to inflate it with a characteristic brand of hot air.

What is said about his allegations of unlawful voting, applies also to his statements about other improper practices in and about the polling places. We cannot think of any election in recent years that the Independent has not tried to explain with assertions that votes were purchased with liquor, and of course similar charges were to be expected this time.

It is all very much like Smoyer, and is quite in line with his refusal to abide by the Republican Primary, in which he presented his candidacy and was decisively defeated.

K. OF C. TO INSTALL OFFICERS TONIGHT

District Deputy To Be Here This Evening For Ceremony

CARD PARTY ON WED.

This evening District Deputy Dorsey and staff of the 15th district, Knights of Columbus, will visit Bristol to install the new officers of Bristol Council, No. 906, K. of C.

A very large assemblage is expected and refreshments will be furnished after the meeting.

On Wednesday evening the monthly card party will be held at the K. of C. Home. A committee is leaving nothing undone to put this card party over big. Very valuable prizes will be offered and a real evening's enjoyment is promised. The public is cordially invited to participate.

On Friday evening, which is designated "K. of C. Night" at St. Mark's harvest party, the entire Council is expected to be on hand.

Lecturer Arthur P. Brady has a very interesting program arranged for this winter's meetings. Many noted educators, athletes and men prominent in different spheres will address the respective meetings.

ELECTION JUDGES IN STATEMENT DENY PRIMARY CHARGES

Judges in First Ward Say That Election Was Properly Conducted

WHOLE BOARD AGREED

Every Challenge Was Properly Ruled Upon, It Is Contended

Bristol, Pa., Oct. 24, 1927.

Editor, Courier: In a signed statement appearing in the Independent of October 21st John F. Smoyer, defeated candidate for the Republican nomination for Town Council, makes the statement that thirty-three illegal votes were cast in the First Ward, in which ward he was a candidate.

As judges of the election in the two precincts of that ward, we desire to state that watchers of John F. Smoyer were actively about the polls on September 20th. They challenged the right to vote of ten electors, in the first precinct and two electors in the second precinct, a total of only 12 in the Ward.

The reasons for the challenges were considered by the two Inspectors on the Boards representing the Republican and Democratic parties and ourselves, and in every instance we found the facts to justify allowing the voter to cast his of her vote.

In no instance was there a division of opinion on the part of the Boards as to any of the voters thus passed upon, possessing the required legal qualifications to exercise the franchise. The decisions were unanimous.

We would also state that in the many years we have acted as either Judge or Inspector of elections in the First Ward, Bristol Borough, we have never known, in a contest, so few challenges, and the evident fact both sides in the contest thoroughly understood the necessary voting qualifications of each voter before he or she presented themselves to the Election Board, and were prepared to present the necessary evidence to sustain the voters' right to exercise the franchise.

We would further state the best of good order prevailed about the election polls, but few voters were accompanied by workers to the polls, practically the entire enrolled vote of the ward acted as if they had their minds made up as to how they intended to vote in advance of their reaching the polling places.

(Signed) JOHN M. WRIGHT, Judge of Election, First Precinct.
(Signed) JAS. E. MOONEY, Judge of Election, Second Precinct.

Charles M. Meredith Is Honored by Fellow Craftsmen

Charles M. Meredith, president of the National Editorial Association, was honored Saturday afternoon by the Weekly Newspaper Association of Montgomery County when a banquet was given in his honor at the Hotel Adelphi, Philadelphia.

Mr. Meredith is publisher and editor of the Quakertown Free Press and has recently been chosen as head of the National Editorial Association which is an organization of newspaper publishers of the United States, numbering more than 6,000.

There were half a hundred guests present including fellow publishers and leaders in all walks of life. They had gathered to testify to the esteem in which the guest is held by his fellow craftsmen and by those in no way directly connected with the publishing business.

Around the table were gathered jurists, legislators, big business men, political leaders and others personally known to the guest.

Those responding to toasts were Walter L. Sanborn, secretary of the Montgomery County Weekly Newspaper Association; Paul R. Eyerle, president, Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association; Charles B. Spatz, a man prominent in the affairs of Lehigh County; Hon. Harold S. Knight, judge of Court of Common Pleas of Montgomery County; Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol; Hon. J. Burnett Holland, Judge of Orphans' Court of Montgomery County; Hon. James S. Boyd, Montgomery County; George Nox McCain, Philadelphia.

Elwood S. Moser, editor and owner of Collegeville Independent, acted as toastmaster.

All of the speakers paid high tribute to Mr. Meredith, his ability as a newspaperman and his personal character.

FRIENDSHIP—FRANCE AND U. S.

The reports, which have from time to time received prominent place in many newspapers throughout the country, in reference to the feeling of friendship between France and America waning, have been dispelled by the two Bristol men who but recently attended the American Legion convention in Paris.

The Bristolians, who joined the second A. E. F. in its trip across seas, were enthusiastic over not only the greeting received by the Legion as a whole, but of the ovations extended the individual ex-servicemen during their prolonged stay in the French city.

Courtesies were noticed on all sides—the children were their friends, having had placed in their minds, probably, stories of the Yankee friends who joined the Allied forces during the days of conflict. From the Eiffel tower Old Glory floated to the breeze. The Stars and Stripes alone were fastened to the tower pole, proclaiming in their own way the bond linking the two nations. Those who own allegiance to Uncle Sam thrilled with pride each time they saw the red and white and the field of blue rippling in the breeze over Paris.

The fact that the chains were left down at the Arc de Triomphe on the occasion of the American Legion parade proves where the United States stands in the estimation and regard of the Republic of France. This is the first time the honor has been accorded a foreign nation.

Just as strongly are the French people regarded as "brothers" by the former dough-boys as in the days of '17 and '18.

PROTECTION, NOT REVENGE

Years ago the United States abolished the practice of sentencing criminals to solitary confinement for long, continuous periods. Solitary confinement once meant that the prisoner neither saw nor talked with any other human being for months or even years. Now, when it is used at all, it provides that the convict shall spend his nights alone but during the day will work and eat with his fellow prisoners.

Aroused by increasing crimes of violence, New Hampshire authorities have threatened to invoke an old state law permitting solitary confinement of bank bandits, payroll robbers and highwaymen. Of course the threat will not be put into force. It was merely a product of justified irritation, and on second thought those who thought of the scheme will be convinced that more harm than good would come of it. There is little doubt that they would be immediately dissuaded if they read in Dickens' "American Notes" the reflections of the English novelist on solitary confinement as he saw it in Pennsylvania on one of his American tours.

Solitary confinement for more than a few hours is rather a form of torture than punishment. It drives men mad and fills with bitter hatred for society the minds of those liberated before they have had time to become crazed.

Modern penology has for its purpose the protection of society, rather than the avenging of society. Modern society, at least in theory, deprives of their liberty only the enemies of society and those whom society hopes to convert into useful citizens through enforced discipline.

Echoes of the Past

Items of Interest as Gleaned from old files of Bucks County Newspapers

Items of interest as follows were culled from the Newtown Enterprise dated September 24, 1892:

William L. Flowers, son of William P. Flowers, formerly of Bucks County, was then with a law firm in Minneapolis, Minn., where he considered himself permanently located in the practice of law. For some weeks then he had been traveling in the valley of the Red River of the North placing mortgages upon wheat farms.

The Presbyterian congregation at Langhorne, had decided to build a new stone church, on the site of the frame chapel they then occupied.

Mrs. Godfrey Schaffer, of near Emille, dislocated her shoulder by a fall a few days previous. Howard, son of Wilson Worthington, of Scottsville, had an arm broken and a shoulder dislocated by his horse running away the previous Saturday.

Forty-two persons from Newtown and Langhorne were attending the grand encampment G. A. R. at Washington that week. Only two names on the list are of those yet living: Winfield S. Ellis and William D. Harvey.

The semi-annual meeting of the Bucks County W. C. T. U. was held in the Baptist Church at Bristol on Thursday, September 22. Many were prevented by the rain from attending. The Union had 731 members, and 123 honorary members. There were 26 unions and 17 Loyal Legions in the county. The president's annual address was an excellent paper and well received by the convention. Cynthia S. Holcomb was unanimously re-elected president. Short speeches were made by Rev. Chipman, Rev. Shields, Rev. Burris, Samuel Swain and O. H. Holcomb. Miss Frances Griffin, of Alabama, spoke in the evening.

In an issue of the Enterprise dated August 27, 1892, the following appeared:

The Post Office Department had ordered that Station O, the old established Byberry post office, should be abolished on September 1st and all mail for Byberry was to be sent to and delivered by carriers to the residents of Byberry from Station N, at Torresdale.

T. Jenks Heliyer, John H. LaRue, Anthony Burton, A. Headley King, William LaRue and Cornwell Woolsten had been appointed viewers to view the site of a proposed county bridge over Guinea creek, in Middletown township.

At an adjourned court held on Monday, Horace G. Reeder, of Newtown, was appointed guardian of Mary E. Kooker, widow of Samuel Kooker, Jr., late of Pineville.

Harry Moore, alias Spencer, a young colored man of Langhorne, had been taken to jail at Doylestown, on the charge of being implicated in the recent robbery of Woodman's mill, at Bridgetown.

Asbury Boileau, a prominent resident of Morrisville, died at that place the previous Saturday of paralysis in the 60th year of his age. He had been a justice of the peace for six years, and was a prominent Democrat. He was a member of the G. A. R.

There was a stone house in Southampton on the farm of William S. Hogeland, near Feasterville, then occupied by John Neisser, that was 164 years old. It was a very old-fashioned house. The Southampton region was settled at a very early period of our county's history.

Stacy Haines, of Lower Makefield, had the largest yield of wheat so far reported that season. His crop ran a trifle over 37 bushels to the acre.

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

The "color organ" which projects colored lights to harmonize with its music, and which recently created a sensation in musical circles, has found an odd adaptation—the motion picture.

"THE FIRST AUTO," with Barney Oldfield and Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
In 1896 Bob, son of Hank Armstrong, a horse fancier, knowing his father's hatred of machines, is secretly inventing gasoline engines and openly courting Rose Robbins. Hank horsechips his son when he discovers his interest in automobiles. Rose intervenes, saving Bob from his father's wrath. Then Bob, stung by Steven Bentley's taunts, thrashes his rival in love. Bob leaves home and Rose promises to wait for him. Four years pass. Steve invites Rose for a motor ride and proposes to her. She shows him a photograph of Bob with the message that he is returning soon to claim her. Steve starts to destroy the picture. Now—

CHAPTER XV
It was a hot, sultry evening in late July. The heat of a summer sun hung desultorily in the slowly falling shadows. Trees drooped, their foliage a dusty gray. Crickets chirped insistently. Frogs croaked monotonously. The faint spark of a firefly came now and again through the shrubbery around the Robbins' home. Rose sat rocking on the porch, a white figure in crisply starched muslin.

An opened letter lay on her lap. More than four years ago now, she was thinking, as she stared into the dusk, since Bob had gone to the city. More than four years—it seemed like more than forty years. A long, long time to wait. Endless days to be passed uneventfully. And more endless days to come. At first it had seemed highly romantic to wait for one's lover to conquer the world and then to return. But conquests took time, and the first taste of glory in matrimony over patience assumed its place. Yet Bob was really doing splendid things.

Rose's reverie was interrupted by the shrill "Honk-honk" of a motor horn. She lifted her head, startled. In front of the gate stood Steve Bentley's new automobile, and at the wheel sat Steve, raising his motor cap. He got out of the car and came up the walk, his long duster flapping about his legs. Rose hastily thrust the letter down the front of her blouse.

"Hot night" he began, coming up on the veranda.

"Yes, isn't it," Rose acceded. "Won't you sit down?"

"Well, I thought you might like to go for a little ride," he stood twirling his cap in his hands. "Might be cooler out in the air."

"Why, that's nice of you, Steve. I'd like to go," Rose accepted. "Dad's gone over to Maysville, and I've been sitting here all alone. And it is hot."

"Well, come along, then."

"Oh, wait. I'll have to get my hat and tell Liza I'm going out. I'll be right back." Rose ran into the house and upstairs, where she hastily rearranged her hair and pinned on a small crowned, straw hat, bound round with ribbon, fluttering with masses of satin bows and piled with feathers. She straightened her ribbon belt and

This unique instrument is the basis of a startling screen effect in Clarence Brown's "Flesh and the Devil," an elaborate Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film of "The Undying Past," famous Sudermann drama, and which is playing at the Riverside Theatre, with John Gilbert, Greta Garbo and Lars Hanson.

The color organ principle is used in the dramatic scene in the picture where John Gilbert stands, penitent, before the great organ on which Lars Hanson plays, while the rays, falling from the stained glass windows above it in the quaint European chapel, convey the message of the music.

The new play, based on one of Europe's greatest classics by a master dramatist, is elaborately staged in reproductions of modern Europe; in fact, so accurate are its replicas and so absolutely true its types that at first glance one would imagine it a picture filmed across the Atlantic rather than in America.

A fool and his money soon pay alimony.

POLLYANNA COLYUM

We hear something occasionally about intelligent crooks, but it is our opinion that if they were really intelligent they would not be crooks. Relatives are no longer distant—even in Europe, due to aviation achievement. Now let's sing: "My Bonnie Flies Over the Ocean."
He pulled that old joke about opening the window and getting "Chile." "That's nothing," said the other. "Last night I attached one wire under my bed and the other to the radiator and got "Hot Springs."

Americanism: Walking very rapidly to save time; stopping to watch a sign painter.

Young Wife (with hair found on husband's coat): "George what does this mean?"

George: "Don't worry about that, dear. It's far too long to be a woman's."

A Philadelphia doctor says to stop hiccup "grasp the left carotid sheath by the thumb and forefinger at the anterior border and midway between the origin and the insertion of the sternocleidomastoid muscle and compress tightly one minute." If this fails you might try the old fashioned remedy of taking seven swallows of water.

Grocer: "Why are you rolling the apple barrel about, Billy?"
Grocer's little son: "Amusing baby, pa."

"But where is baby?"
"Oh, she's inside the barrel."

We see that the price of land along the Canadian border has increased thirty-two quarts an acre.

A health to the girl that can dance like a dream,
And the girl that can pound the piano;
A health to the girl who writes verse by the ream

To the saint and the sweet little sinner—
But here's to the cleverest girl of the lot,
The girl that can cook a good dinner.
